Snowplow Crews Rescue Trapped Auto Travelers

RABBIT EARS PASS, COLO.—Chet Pierce says that most folks caught in a mountain snowstorm "are so busy trying to kill themselves they don't have time to do anything sensible."

Pierce, 39, is boss of the snowplow crews which buck the big white blanket 10 months of the year here atop the continental divide.

He estimates that his crews pull more than a thousand motorists out of the drifts every year.

A Rabbit Ears Pass snowstorm is not picturesque. In fact, you can't see it. Visibility is zero and the temperature often drops to 35 below.

"You don't pull that many people out of the snow without learning a little about them," Pierce said.

"Take that fella from Chicago last year.

"When I found him he'd let all the air out of his tires. He'd piled the back seat of his sedan about so high with snow and he was sitting there stuck tight, talking to himself.

"He told me any fool could see he'd let the air out so's to get more traction. And he'd used the snow to make his rear end heavy. After I told him the score he wanted to know if I'd mind piping a little air into his tires—out of my tires."

9,700 Feet Above Sea Level

This raw snow-bleached strip of the world is known to Pierce and his plow jockeys as Bunny hill. It's about 9,700 feet above sea level. In some spots the highway towers 1,000 feet above the valleys.

The pass is named for a rusty rock formation which some imaginative pioneer decided resembled a rabbit's ears.

A year's snowfall in the mountain-pass country has been known to tickle the 89-foot mark. Five feet of snow fell here in one week.

"When you know snow," Pierce said, "it doesn't scare you so much. But we get folks through here that never saw frost outside of an icebox.

"They get panicky. Sometimes they just stand alongside their cars scratching at the fenders and crying."

Motorists Get Angry

An occasional motorist gets angry when the plow jockeys stop him at the top of the pass and insist he either put on tire chains, or turn back.

One such driver told Pierce that Pierce had "no respect for human nature." That was five years ago. The plow boss is still trying to figure that out.

Pierce and his men live in a log cabin camp near the peak of the pass.

The crew—which ranges from six to eight men—is composed mostly of youngsters who were raised on ranches. All are Coloradoans. They all know Bunny hill as well as you know the trail from living room to kitchen.

This comes in handy at night when the blade of a man's plow is nudging along the lip of a canyon and the trees below look no biger than the buttons on a baby's coat.

"You know," said Plow Driver Warren Gleason, smiling up the slope, "this may not be God's country. But one thing's certain. If the Lord ever wants it, he won't have to stoop very far to get it."

Steep Mexican Chicle Prices Discourage U. S. Gum Makers

MEXICO CITY—High prices have driven leading United States chewing-gum manufacturers from the Mexican chicle market.

As a result, the industry is practically paralyzed. Exports are down approximately 96 per cent, compared with a year ago.

For years American companies had absorbed more than 90 per cent of the Mexican chicle production.

In the 1946-'47 season, these buyers obtained 17,630,800 pounds of Mexican chicle. For the 1947-'48 season, the contracts are reported to be only for 770,000 pounds.

Civilians in the United States are said to chew annually an average of 107 sticks of gum each.

But World War II saw gum made an important item in the food kits of soldiers. This caused business to boom, and American companies were said to have built big stockpiles to supply the demand.

Plowman, Bitten by Assailant, Can't Make Mule Understand

MURFREESBORO, TENN. — A Negro plowman whose lip was bitten off in a fight sued his assailant because he fears his mule will no longer understand orders.

Howard Massey, attorney for Herman Robertson, who is asking $1,500 damages from another Negro, said after filing suit:

"My client greatly fears that he has suffered such an impediment of speech that he will never be able to make his plow mule understand him again."

Massey said Robertson also feared that a goatee in which he took pride will not grow back.

A physician sewed the dismembered lower lip back on. Massey said the repair job apparently was a success.

Invasion of Insects By Air Poses Threat

Pests, Plant Diseases Survive Shorter Trips

Danger of invasion by undesirable alien insects grows apace in every agricultural country of the world as air transport, which is accounting for an ever increasing share of traffic, cuts the time of travel between them from days to hours, and as airplanes take over a larger share of traffic.

Pests that might not withstand a long sea voyage may survive the shorter air ride in good shape. Reaching new lands where conditions favor their development they soon may build up a strong colony that could become as costly as the Hessian fly, the European corn borer, the Japanese beetle, the codling moth or the cotton boll weevil.

The department of agriculture is charged with this country's defenses against the entry of dangerous foreign insects and plant diseases. Even toys have been found to be carriers.

Farmers must be sure that all mail and express from foreign countries have been inspected and passed free of any insects or diseases before being permitted on their land.

Study of Pigeons Shows Birds Have Numerous Superstitions

BLOOMINGTON, IND.—The superstition that makes a card player get up and walk around the table to "change his luck," can be produced experimentally in pigeons.

"Superstitious" birds were developed here by Dr. B. F. Skinner, psychologist at Indiana university.

These birds go through all sorts of strange rituals even more elaborate than that of a baseball pitcher. One goes running wildly around his cage always in the same direction.

Another pokes his head into one of the upper corners of the cage. Another acts as if he were trying to toss something with his head. Two birds swing their heads and bodies in a sort of pendulum motion.

It was fairly easy, Dr. Skinner found, to teach the pigeons to trace their luck to such absurd gestures.

All he had to do was to rig up a clock to give food to the birds at regular intervals, entirely regardless of what the bird is doing at the moment. The bird, who is ravenously hungry, tends to repeat rapidly whatever he was doing when the food arrived.

Russian Composers Charge Hollywood Stole Their Music

MOSCOW.—Four of Russia's best known composers are accusing a Hollywood film firm of pirating their compositions to use in the movie, "The Iron Curtain."

They are Dmitri Shostakovich, Serge Prokofieff, Aram Khatchaturian and Nicholai Miaskovsky. The Soviet newspaper Izvestia published their charges.

"None of us has ever given or could give permission for utilization of our music in 'The Iron Curtain,'" the letter said.

In Hollywood, 20th Century-Fox studio officials issued this statement:

"We have used the music of these four composers in our picture, 'The Iron Curtain,' which deals with the Communist spy activities in North America, because it is stirringly dramatic and therefore appropriate to the theme . . ."

These composers all were criticized by the Communist party central committee recently for formalism in their music.

Hitch-Hikers Find Thumbing More Expensive Than Fare

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Thinking of going on a hitch-hiking trip? Don't do it, says Donald Trachte.

The 17-year-old St. Louis youth had the same idea. He and two pals figured they'd hitch-hike to Florida.

But they ended up walking the 318 miles to Memphis—with suitcases.

It took eight days—and cost more for food than train or bus fare would have. Police stopped them twice for questioning. Trachte said—but no rides.

Now the two pals have flown back home. And Trachte is going by bus. Motorists, Trachte said, just don't seem to like hikers any more.

U. S. Treasury Department

U. S. Treasurer Has Signature On 27 Billions

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Meet the Treasurer of the United States, William Alexander Julian. He's been on the job since 1933.

Ever hear of him? Lots of people haven't.

If you haven't, it's because you don't read your paper money—any paper money—down in the left hand corner.

There it is, his signature: W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States. He's not secretary of the treasury. That's John W. Snyder.

Julian is the big bookkeeper on all the money the government collects and spends. He has a staff of 1,600 people. His salary: $10,000 a year.

Snyder, as secretary of the treasury, has a different job. He doesn't have to worry about the bookkeeping. He sets money policies, such as on government loans.

Snyder's signature is on all the paper money printed since he became secretary a couple of years ago. It's down in the right hand corner opposite Julian's.

Name Is on All Currency

But Julian's is on all the paper money printed since 1933, when he became treasurer, opposite the names of all the treasury secretaries since then: William H. Woodin, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Fred A. Vinson, and Snyder.

In short, Julian's name is on paper money worth about 27½ billion dollars. His office is part of the treasury department under Snyder.

Back around 1923 Julian retired from business. He was reported then to be a millionaire.

He had been a shoe salesman. Then, as a shoe manufacturer, he built up the fortune he is reported to have.

He was also president of a trust company in Cincinnati, Ohio, and director of other banks. When he quit making shoes, he kept his bank directships.

Meanwhile, he was a Democrat. Rumor said he was one of the "angels" of the Democratic party in Ohio. Then President Roosevelt and the "new deal" came along in 1933.

Roosevelt Appoints Him

Roosevelt appointed Julian treasurer of the United States.

If Julian retired from business in 1923 and became treasurer in 1933, how old was he in 1933?

In 1933 friends guessed he was about 68 years old. Newspaper files don't show his age. The story of his life, but not his age, is in Who's Who in America.

Julian himself has been shy about his age. One of his top assistants, asked about it, said:

"The only ones who know the answer to Julian's age are God and Julian. I should think he's in his late seventies."

But if he was 68 in 1933, he must be 83 now. Asked directly, Julian said: "I'm old enough to know better."

"Won't you tell, just for the record?"

"No. Why should I?"

Return of Antarctic Expedition Discounts Rumors of Uranium

WASHINGTON—Antarctica is not likely to be the scene of a "uranium rush" or any other kind of international scramble for mineral wealth, at least in the immediate future.

Commodore Gerald L. Ketchum, leader of the navy's two-ship 1947-48 Antarctic expedition which has just returned after five months "down under," said that "no minerals of any commercial value" had been found at any point on the coast.

And the expedition worked its way along the shores of the world's southernmost continent through more than half its perimeter.

More than two tons of mineral specimens were brought back by Dr. Earl T. Apfel, of Syracuse university, geologist of the expedition, but they are "just rocks."

They do have considerable scientific interest, for by analyzing them Dr. Apfel hopes to get some idea of the geologic age of the continent.

In one area there were quantities of garnets, left by the disintegration of granitic rock; but these again are without commercial value.

Chemists Develop New Agent Which Makes Grass Greener

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Du Pont Company announced the development of a new chemical that it claims will grow grass greener, smoother and healthier.

It is called F 531 fungicide. Du Pont says the product controls dollarspot, a turf disease that causes bleached spots of dead grass about the size of a silver dollar.

F 531 is a mixture of calcium, zinc, copper and cadmium. Du Pont says it "also controls copper spot and pink patch, two lesser diseases that sometimes appear in turf areas."

"The new turf fungicide is an undiluted, green-colored soluble powder that, mixed with water, is easy to apply as a spray," a spokesman explained. "It does not stain, does not corrode the metal in spray equipment, has no odor, and does not harm the grass to which it is applied when used according to directions."

OWEN - FERGUSON

Miss Ariana Bell Ferguson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett B. Ferguson became the bride of Mr. James Lowell Owen, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Owen, of Brookneal, at 3:30 Saturday afternoon, May 15th, 1948. The Rev. Cecil G. Carter officiated, using the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style gown of white satin, designed with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and gored skirt extending in a circular train, with a finger-tip veil falling from a tiara of seed pearls. The sleeves came to a point over the hand. Her flowers were a nosegay of gardenias and stephanotis, centered with an orchid.

Miss Marie Ferguson, wearing a blue gown, similar to the bride's, with red roses at the shoulder was her sister's maid of honor.

The ringbearer was Calvin Ray Ferguson, Jr., nephew of the bride.

LeRoy Owen, brother of the groom, was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a southern trip. The couple will make their home in Lynchburg.
